

Margot MillerWorld Studies, Debate, Newspaper

Margot received a Bachelor of Arts in anthropology/sociology at Lewis & Clark College in Portland, Oregon. She has been teaching history and geography for over ten years in both the public and private sector. Margot is a native of California where she started teaching at a college prep school in Lake Tahoe. After meeting her husband, the two moved to Southern India to teach for two years at Kodaikanal International School. Following their adventures in India, they moved to Switzerland, where they taught at the International School of Geneva. Margot is an avid climber, skier, mountain biker and traveler.