

Christian WatersMath, Science

Christian grew up in the Salt Lake City area and graduated from the University of Utah with a B.S. in Telecommunications. He began a career in marketing and P.R. in the Telecommunications industry at AT&T Wireless Services and Internet startup ePhones. He made a philosophical decision to become an educator and joined the New York City Teaching Fellowship. He obtained a Masters in Education from Hunter College and taught sixth grade for two years in New York public schools. Thereafter, he and his wife moved to Rome, Italy where he taught fifth grade and later elementary technology at the American Overseas School of Rome. He is excited to start his second year at Rowland Hall. He is an avid outdoor enthusiast, cyclist, artist and shameless gadget geek.
